This week we would like to introduce you to member Sarah A. Abdallah, the founder and CEO of Functional Creative Design. She is known for her Interior Design and innovative strategy at some of the most iconic hotels, restaurants, co-working spaces, and residences in the world including Lincoln Center, The Soho Grand, and Neuehouse NY/ LA. She honed her perspective through firm experiences working with Rockwell Group, Tony Chi and Perkins Eastman - some of the most prominent contemporary Interior Design and Architectural Firms.

MEMBER FEATURE: SARAH A. ABDALLAH

Sarah is a dynamic woman of bi-racial and bi-cultural background. Her authentic diversity of thought is what drives her understanding of building her business, her personal experience and culture. Passionate about designing spaces that encourage healthy movement and a community mindset, she integrates the 5 senses, the latest advances in wellbeing and technology into hospitality, nightlife and community wellness spaces. Sarah excels in elevating both form and function, using her multiple degrees in Fine Arts, Psychology and Social Justice, and minor degrees in Gender Studies, Art Therapy, and Art & Technology, to inform her choices as the creative director of her team.

Known for inspired, elegant, timeless spaces that both calm and stimulate the mind, Sarah is dedicated to minimizing environmental impact and using sustainable, ethical materials whenever possible. Sarah has long been a proponent of remote working to build an ideal team without being restricted by geography, and believes the current COVID-19 crisis is an opportunity for us to recreate the landscape of major cities and reimagine interior structure of home.
